"A GRIMSBY BOY IN FRANCE"

The accompanying photograph shows a GRIMSBY boy, who is at present "doing his bit" in France. Standing is Pte. Timothy Farrell, a son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Farrell, North GRIMSBY, who enlisted at GRIMSBY in 1916, with the 98th Battalion, and went overseas, to England with that unit, in 1916. After but a month or six weeks in "Blighty" he was drafted to a Canadian Labor Battalion, and proceeded to France August of 1916, where he has been, constantly, since. After some months service with the Labor unit, "Tim" was put at farrier work with a transport section, and was later transferred to a stretcher-bearer detachment, and is still with that branch of the service, engaged in "mopping up." The other soldier in the cut is Pte. Alex. Ledingham, a nephew of Mrs. Charles T. Farrell, whom Pte. Farrell "palled" with since their joint enlistment, and who was killed in action some months ago. "Tim" says "I sure would like to be home, but not before we have put Fritzie where he belongs."

TO INTER MAN WHO PLANNED INVASION OF CANADA

New York, Aug. 19.—Interment of Doctor Frederick August Richard von Streuch, a wealthy physician of this city, who was arrested recently on a Presidential warrant, was recommended to-day by the Enemy Alien Bureau.

Von Streuch, who said he had been a protégé of Bismarck, is declared by the authorities to have written to the German Emperor at the outbreak of war, offering his services in any capacity. He also communicated with Capt. Franz von Papen, and was alleged to have favored sending German reservists from this country to Canada, to stop the flow of Canadian troops to France.

EARLY MORNING BLAZE DESTROYS THE RESIDENCE OF DR. DONALD CLARKE

About four o'clock this morning Wednesday, the citizens of the Village and District were aroused from their beds by the violent ringing of the fire-alarm, and it was discovered that the fine, large, brick and stone residence of Dr. Donald Clarke, about one mile west of the Village was a prey to flames.

For such an early hour it was astonishing the number of volunteer fire-fighters who turned out to assist the Fire Department in taking their apparatus to the scene of the conflagration, and the chemical engine was well on its way, with the hook-and-ladder-wagon following, before half of the boys had the sleep rubbed out of their eyes.

Upon arrival at the fire, Fire Chief Smith quickly realized that he would have a difficult task to control the fire, if he was to do so at all, and put the volunteers at his disposal to work. It is thought by a number of spectators that a chemical engine was not so effective as it was, and that, with the assistance of a well-organized bucket-line, the main portion of the house could have been saved.

The fire apparently started in the kitchen, to the north of the main building, and attached to it, and was discovered by Dr. Clarke's younger daughter, Douglas, who aroused the household and notified the telephone Central in order that the alarm might be given.

The total contents of the house were saved by a great deal of hard work on the part of those on the scene, and were not damaged to any extent except insofar as being handled very hurriedly would damage them.

The water supply gave out very shortly after a bucket-line had been formed, and it was seen that nothing could be done to save the house from being almost a total loss; as soon as the fire had spread to the roof of the main building, the ceiling began to collapse with the heat, and very shortly the roof

GRIMSBY AND DISTRICT HONOR ROLL

For the purpose of having the Honor Roll of GRIMSBY and District kept up-to-date, and all particulars of service of the members kept track of, it is requested that relatives and friends of all men in the Service forward the following information to J. A. M. Livingston, GRIMSBY, Ontario, who, as Secretary of the GRIMSBY and District Branch, Great War Veterans' Association of Canada, is endeavouring to bring the Honor Roll of this District up to date.

This will not be a great deal of trouble, and will be of inestimable value to the Town and District.

Number; Name; Rank; Corps enlist in; Corps and date of proceeding to England; Corps while in England; Date of proceeding to France, and Corps drafted to; Date and rank of any promotions, or reversions in rank; If wounded, once or more, the dates and location, if possible; If killed in action, the date and location, if possible; If decorated, the date and class of decoration, and for what particular action; or if mentioned in despatches, date and action for which mention is made. If returned to Canada, date of return, and if discharged, date of discharge; If not wounded, gassed or shell-shocked, but returned to Canada and discharged for any other reason, the date of return and reason; and if subsequently re-enlisted, date and Corps.

If the relatives of all men who have done the above, will cooperate with the Secretary of the G. W. V. A. in supplying the above information, the Honor Roll of GRIMSBY and District will be complete in every detail; with but very little trouble and it is urged that the information requested be supplied as soon as possible.

For those who have not proceeded Overseas, but who have been doing duty in Canada, practically the same information is required, insofar as the particulars of their service is concerned.

Don't delay, but send this information in right away—it will be appreciated, and will greatly help in the up-keep of a permanent record to our heroes' services in the present great war.

SOME LOW-PRICED MEATS

Certain parts of the butchered carcasses which provide us with meat are comparatively low in price. These parts have not been generally popular in this country, although they are in great demand in Europe and also in the United States. Beef hearts, livers, tripe, or tail's, sheep's heads, calves' heads, pigs' feet and many other parts of the carcasses might well be used more freely in Canada than they are, thus relieving the pressure of the demand upon roasts, steaks and other higher priced cuts. Any good recipe book will tell you how to cook these cheaper meats and make of them delicious, tempting dishes.

Tax Notice

All ratepayers whose Taxes are in arrears for either 1917 or any year previous to 1917, are hereby notified that such arrears must be paid, or arrangement made regarding payment at once, or a stringent action will be taken to collect.

J. O. KONKLE, Tax Collector, Grimsby, Ont.

Beautiful island settings in and about Honolulu are features of Secque Hayakawa's Paramount picture, "Hidden Pearls," showing Saturday, August 24th at Moore's Theatre. Is picturesque and novel in character as "The Bottle Imp," "Hidden Pearls" is a unique production written by Benish Marie Dix and directed by George H. Metford. The cast includes Theodore Roberts and Margaret Loomis, as well as Jack Holt, Florence Vidor, James Cruze and other popular players. It is a story of intrigue and pearl hunting, containing a very unusual love affair between a native girl and Hayakawa, himself a half-breed.

GRIMSBY BOYS WOUNDED IN THE BIG OFFENSIVE

GRIMSBY and District is feeling the effects of the latest push by the Allies on the Western Front, in the casualty list, and it is to be hoped that none of our brave lads have anything more serious happen to them, than to be wounded badly enough to reach a Base Hospital, and probably England for convalescence and rest, after participating in the Hell that it is certain the Canadians are going through at the present time.

Up to the time of going to press the following casualties have been reported:—

KITCHEN, Fred, the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Kitchen, and the second boy of their family to be wounded, has been put out of action by gun-shot wounds in the chin, neck and both hands. Fred Kitchen enlisted in the 173rd Battalion, Hamilton, in 1916, and proceeded to England with that unit the same year. He was drafted to France in November of 1917, and has been with a Western Battalion, there, since that time, serving with the machine-gun section.

JACKSON, Andrew, a son of David and Mrs. Jackson, GRIMSBY, who has probably gained a trip to "Blighty" through a gun-shot wound in the left thigh, and is at present in No. 9 General Hospital, Boulogne, enlisted in the 120th Battalion, Hamilton, in 1916; was promoted to Sergeant of that unit and proceeded overseas in 1916. After a long time in England as an instructional Sergeant, he reverted to the ranks in order to see some action, and was drafted to a Western Battalion in February of 1918.

SMYTH, Clarence, the only son of Simeon and Mrs. Smyth, GRIMSBY, originally enlisted with the 98th Battalion, in 1915; through illness, was not able to proceed overseas with that unit, but went over in the Fall of 1916 with the 176th. After considerable time spent in England, he was drafted to France and there joined a Toronto Battalion, one of the "Original First" units. He served in the signalling section of that unit from the time he joined it, until the present, when he has been put out of action by a head wound in the head.

DENTON, W. H.—Judge Denton yesterday received information that his son, Lieut. Wilfrid Herbert Denton, had been wounded on August 8. The Lieutenant enlisted in 1915, and went overseas in 1916 with the 2nd Battalion. In September of the latter year he was wounded at the Somme, and spent the following winter in Toronto while recuperating. In May, 1917, Lieut. Denton returned to the fighting line. He is in his 21st year and was a first-year student at Toronto University when he enlisted, having graduated from the University of Toronto.

ATTEMPT AT SHOP-BREAKING INTO GRIMSBY FRUIT GROWER'S FRUIT SHEDS AND OFFICES

On Saturday night, August 17th, County Constable Judson O. Konkile, in conjunction with two plainclothes men of the Hamilton detective department, took into custody three young men of the Ambitious City, and lodged them in the Hamilton Jail, for an attempt to break into the fruit sheds and offices of the GRIMSBY Fruit Growers, Limited, on the fruit shipping platform at the Grand Trunk Station.

It appears that the young gentlemen of none-as-strict morals were known to have left Hamilton on Saturday evening, in an automobile, with the object of entering and pilfering appropriating such valuables as fell under their hands, a place in this thriving Village, where they were not rightfully supposed to have access.

A couple of sleuths from Hamilton got into communication with Constable Konkile and informed him that they were following the would-be burglars, and for him to be no the look-out for them.

About eleven o'clock, a car rolled into the quiet Main street, one of the occupants enquired of a passing stranger as to the whereabouts of the fruit sheds, and the car proceeded on its way down what is known as Depot street. The party pair began a still-hunt for water with which to slack the third of their motor.

For some unknown reason, which they were at a loss to explain, they made diligent search of the O. & W. fruit sheds, thence to the GRIMSBY Fruit Growers, Limited, fruit sheds, for a water-tap, and as eager were they to be on their way, that they went so far as to try and open the window and the door of the latter named offices, in an endeavor to procure the necessary fluid to assist them.

In the meantime, Constable Konkile and his confreres from Hamilton, had taken up their positions where they could watch and hear the proceedings, without being seen, themselves, and after the attempt to break into the buildings had been given up, the sleuths followed the "bad men" and placed them under arrest.

They were taken to Hamilton and appeared before Magistrate Jells, but were returned to GRIMSBY to be dealt with upon request of the sleuths' parties concerned, and were arranged in front of Police-Magistrate Kidd and Magistrate Drope, with County Crown Attorney M. Brennan, prosecuting, on Tuesday of this week.

James Bradney, appeared in court on his own defence, did not cross-examine the Crown witnesses, and were remanded for trial.

They are all young men in their early twenties, and were well-dressed, and they appeared quite confident that when they come to trial and have their counsel appear in their behalf, they will easily escape conviction.

They all claim it is their first appearance before a Court.

LIEUT. PELOS COLE, AN OLD GRIMSBY BOY WOUNDED

In a telegram received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Cole, of Burlington it is stated that their son, Pelos Harold Cole, had been officially reported wounded and was now recuperating at the Second Westcourt military hospital at Rouen, France.

Lieut. Cole was through the battles of Vimy Ridge, Passchendaele, Lens and Hill 70. For valiant service at Vimy Ridge he received sergeant's stripes and after the battles of Passchendaele and Lens he was awarded a military medal. After the battle of Hill 70 he was transferred to England, where he took out his commission as a Lieutenant, returning to France on May 14 with the 27th battery, 4th brigade, where he served up till the time he was wounded. Lieut. Cole enlisted in Toronto, and went to England with the 74th battery, and on leaving for France was transferred to the 4th battery. Lieut. Cole has now seen 16 months' service in France, and is eager to get back with his men on the firing line again.

Lieut. Cole was born in GRIMSBY and spent part of his boyhood here. His father, A. C. Cole or as he was popularly known here "Young Gus" was born in GRIMSBY and lived here all his life until he went to Burlington as Station Agent for the Grand Trunk Railway. Mrs. Cole was a Miss Price of Jordan. They have but two sons and both are overseas, and their parents justly feel very proud of their boys.

A short time ago the Editor of The Independent was at Burlington and saw the Military Medal won by Lieut. Cole.

Nearly all of the GRIMSBY boys are living up to our traditions. There are only a few slackers left who are tied to mammy's apron strings, afraid to make the big adventure.

GRIMSBY BEACH ZEPHYRUS
Last Friday, the Dominion Shipping Co. picnic, over 1400 strong, came to the Beach on two of the Canada Steamship Line's Steamers. A fine band accompanied the excursion and a splendid day was spent by the crowd.

The fruit growers have started to bring some peaches to the G. T. R. station, but the crop in this section is not nearly what it should be owing to the extreme cold of the past winter.

The Beach looks much better, now, than it has for some time. The G. T. R. Agent reports that the traffic into the Beach, this year, exceeds last year's by at least fifty per cent. for the corresponding month.

On Saturday last, the Plumbers and Steamfitters of Toronto invaded the Beach, about 1200 strong and spent a very pleasant day. It is estimated that over two-thousand people enjoyed the many attractions at the Beach on Saturday last, driving in from the district surrounding. The weather was most favorable for a most enjoyable day, and it seemed almost an echo of the Fifts of July of former years.

"The good for Nothing" is the title of the new world-Picture Brady-Made which will be shown on Monday, August 26th at Moore's Theatre. The stars in this delightful production are Carlyle Blackwell, Muriel Ostriche and Evelyn Greeley. The production was also directed by Mr. Blackwell who has made the picture a thing of beauty and joy. The story tells of the manner in which a good-for-nothing made good. Jack, the man who finally made good, is played by Carlyle Blackwell. It is a great character that Mr. Blackwell has made of Jack and he is ably assisted by Muriel Ostriche and Evelyn Greeley in making the picture a most notable offering. The scenic effects are notable.

CHANGE IN ROUTE OF NEW HIGHWAY

Main Street From Hamilton to New Money Creek to be Followed

The Provincial highway from Hamilton to the Niagara frontier, taken over by the Ontario Government, will not follow absolutely the Queenston and Grimsby or Stony Creek Road. It has been decided by the Highways Department to follow Main Street from Hamilton to a point near Stony Creek on the Stony Creek Road. This route was preferred to the Barton Road and the Stony Creek Road itself, since it avoids the Red Hills railway crossing and is clear of radial railway tracks. It is a mile shorter than the Creek Road and the clear land on either side permits of widening to 90 feet, the width desired for Provincial highways.

Last Friday a deputation from Lincoln County composed of Warren Fleming, L. R. Collier, chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee and Peter Robinson, roads superintendent, waited upon W. A. McClean, Deputy Minister of Highways, to seek information about the work the Government intends doing on the road this year. Mr. McClean stated that he would be chiefly maintenance, and that attention of ditching with permanent surfacing in a few places, where it will lower heavy maintenance costs. The department, said the deputy, did not believe in proceeding with permanent work until its engineers had had at least a Spring and a Fall in which to study the condition of the road foundation, etc. In this way thousands of dollars would be saved.

AN OUTBREAK OF PEAR AND CHERRY SLUG

During June and July, cherry, and plum trees in various parts of the Province were seriously damaged by a leaf-feeding blackish, slug-like insect (see illustration) called the pear and cherry slug. In many orchards, the foliage, particularly of sour cherry trees, was almost wholly destroyed. As there are two broods of this insect and as the second brood is liable to be as destructive as the first, we would strongly advise fruit growers to keep a watchful eye on their cherry, pear and plum trees during August and September, and if the slug threatens to become again injurious, a spray of arsenate of lead (2 1/2 lbs. to 40 gallons of water) should be applied. In instances where there are only a few trees, the slugs may be destroyed by dusting air slaked lime or flint dust on the foliage.—W. A. Moss, Dominion Entomological Laboratory, Vineland Station, Ontario.

SOME STRANGE ANIMALS.

Record of Hunt on Snow Mountain in Asia.

Here is a story of big and little game. Its scene is laid a long, long way from Manhattan, and it is told in full (this, of course, is but a snatch) in Harper's by Roy Chapman Andrews, who was in charge of the Asiatic Zoological Expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, New York. Mr. Andrews writes: "On the Snow Mountain we found snow living at altitudes of from ten to thirteen thousand feet in dense spruce forests among the cliffs. The animals seemed to be fond of sleeping under overhanging rocks, and we were continually finding beds which gave evidence of very extensive use. Apparently snow seldom came out into the open, but feed upon leaves and grass while in the thick cover, so that getting a shot at one as I did at Huiyai is merely a matter of extreme good fortune and might never be duplicated.

"Besides goral and serow, the Snow Mountain yielded us the blue, or crested, muntjac, the rarest specimen which we obtained upon the expedition. These beautiful little deer have a dark, slate-blue coat and a rather bushy tail, white beneath, which, when the animal is running, is displayed as prominently as the flag of the Virginia deer.

"The red muntjac is one of the most common animals throughout Yunnan and is much larger than the Indian or the Chinese species. These animals are often called barking deer because of their loud, harsh bark, which may be heard for a long distance if the night is still. At one of our camps they used to bark very frequently during the day, but it is not easy to kill one without the aid of dogs or hunters, for they live in such dense jungle that it is almost impossible to force one's way through the thickets without a good deal of noise. In the early morning or just at evening we sometimes found them feeding in clearings on the edge of the heavy cover, but they always kept a sharp watch and disappeared at the slightest sign of danger. The muntjac is especially interesting because its pellicle which is covered with skin and hair instead of fur, is abruptly from the skull as in one of members of the deer family.

"On the Snow Mountain porcupines were not uncommon, and when hunting big game we often were greatly annoyed to find that our dogs had followed the trail of one of these animals. We would arrive to see the hounds dancing about the burrow with excited yelps, instead of having a goral or serow with its back to a cliff, as we had expected. These porcupines are quite different in appearance from those with which we are familiar in America, for the quills are sometimes eighteen inches in length and project far beyond the back.

"Our month on the Snow Mountain yielded splendid results. Not only did we secure an unrivalled collection of serows and gorals, but small mammals proved to be abundant and of great variety. Mice, voles, Asiatic white-footed mice, spiny rats, chipmunks, squirrels, weasels, bats and ten different species of shrews kept us busy preparing skins. Of the larger animals we obtained foxes, civets, cats, pandas, palm civets, flying squirrels, polecats, genets, panthers, and other animals peculiar to Asia, some of which undoubtedly represent species new to science."

Localisms Rich English.

We are led to the conclusion that the dispersion of those who speak English is not now a danger or even a disadvantage. We can see that there may even be advantage for standard English in that it can adopt, whenever it sees fit, the new words first tried out in one or another of its separate territories. These new words are at first only localisms, British or American or Australian. They may not survive for long; they may remain localisms doomed to perish sooner or later; or they may be adopted at last by the main body of those who speak English and who write it. "Cad" and "fad" were at first only localisms, struggling for existence and getting slowly into use sporadically in England, until at last they achieved a peaceful penetration into the Anglo-Saxon language; then they ceased to be mere Britishisms; they won recognition as useful words worthy of admission into standard English. A like fate has befallen "boos" and "boom," the first a localism of New York (descended from the days when the Empire City was New Amsterdam), and the second a spontaneous creation of the lumber camps of Michigan. In both cases the words were in common use all over the United States; they were then merely Americanisms; and after a while they made their way into the British Empire, until now they had fair to be lifted into standard English.

Japan's Railroad.

Minister Baron Goto's project for the construction of 500 miles of connecting railways, chiefly on the main island of the empire, has been adopted by the Railway Council of Japan. A special appropriation of $46,000,000 was added to $67,500,000 previously appropriated. This will release, during the next ten years, $108,500,000 for building new lines. In addition to the $113,000,000, which the present roads have to their credit for improvements, the Council voted another special appropriation of $9,000,000 for widening tunnels in anticipation of the broader gauge. Premier Terauchi was present at the meeting of the Railway Council and made a brief address, dwelling upon the importance of better transportation facilities.—East and West.

Change of Name. "Do you think Josh will be glad to get back to the old place?" asked Mrs. Corntassel.

"I'm sure he will," replied her husband. "What I've read about 'no man's land' makes me think a sight of plain, peaceable, ploughed ground ought to be right satisfactory and soothing."

A LANDMARK IN PARIS.

St. Gervais Was Church Bombarded by Long-Range German Gun.

The Paris church bombarded on Good Friday is noted both as one of the most beautiful and ancient architectural monuments of the city, and as having for its vicar one of the most remarkable and best-loved priests of the day. The cure of St. Gervais is respected, loved, admired by men of all creeds. His simple goodness, his energy, his large-heartedness, his self-sacrificing life, draw all men to him. The service, which had called so many people, even those of differing creeds, together on that fatal Good Friday had been specially arranged with a view to gaining added funds for the ambulance St. Gervais, the good cure's war hospital. For the famous Chateaux de St. Gervais—the members of the choir-school where the music of the time and style of Palestrina's unaccompanied plain song, alone is studied—forced by the war to interrupt their work gave their first public recital since its outbreak on Good Friday of last year for the same object. This year, on Good Friday, their numbers yet more decreased, they gathered again at the service that was to prove so fatal.

The first sacred edifice on the site of this fine old church was a small chapel built in the sixth century to shelter the bones of two brothers, Gervais and Protais, martyrs of the time of Nero. The chapel was beyond the city boundary then. A church succeeded the chapel. A beautiful Gothic church was built on the site in the twelfth century, of which the choir, the last remaining vestiges. The walls we know, the beautiful Gothic arches, the wonderfully tall pillars, the high-valued roof, now, alas, lying prone, shattered by the enemy shell, date from the closing years of the fifteenth and the early years of the sixteenth century. The glorious stained glass is chiefly sixteenth-century work. The grand facade, a Renaissance frontage, clapped on to a Gothic building, with pillars of the three orders, Doric, Ionic, Corinthian, superimposed, was added by the renowned architect Simon de Brosses in 1616.

The church has many historical associations. In the Chapelle Dorée, its walls lined with fine Flemish paintings in richly moulded gilt frames, the girl of fifteen destined to become Madame de Malignon was married to the crippled but kind-hearted and strangely clever marquis de Sauron. At the Revolution, the insurgent mob attacked the beautiful pillars, tried to shake them down. Cracks then made are still plainly visible. Robespierre, anxious, no doubt, for his own safety and that of other revolutionists in the vicinity, ordered them to cease their efforts.

On the square before the church is a tree; a tree is figured in the iron railing of the balconies on houses near—memorial of the big elm tree beneath the shade of which in long days men of law sat or stood to administer justice in the Place St. Gervais. Hence the expression, Attendez sous l'orme, i.e., "to wait beneath the elm tree," used in reference to tardy justice in law.

Why Russian Armies Dissolved.

As the line was removed, the soldier began to wonder why he was at the front and could find no reason. There, on every side, were German agents, ready with forcible arguments to prove to him that he was there only because England had forced Russia into the war. Where the men were especially ignorant, the most outrageous lies were told them. Every day the German aeroplanes dropped newspapers into the Russian trenches. These papers were printed in Russian and were called by the names of various Russian newspapers. One I remember particularly was called the Pravda (the Right). Among other things it said that England had brought about and financed the revolution, and had forced the Czar to abdicate, because Sir George Buchanan was to be made Czar; that England already had Archangel and had taken possession of the whole northern part of Russia; that she was allowing her allies, the Japanese, to take possession of Siberia as far as the Ural Mountains; that President Wilson was trying to resist the money interests in America, who were forcing him into the war; that the English laborers were all on strike and that peace riots were occurring daily all over England.

The more intelligent among the soldiers did not believe all that was published in these papers, but among the great mass at the front were found many who believed every word.

Dutchman Built Submarine.

The first submarine boat of which history makes any record was built by a Dutchman named Van Driebeek. In 1640, the boat was built in England with money said to have been advanced by King James I. According to reports the vessel had a unique ballasting system. A number of gun-skin bags were placed under the deck between two large planks. These bags, when filled with water caused the vessel to sink. To cause it to rise again with a windlass arrangement, forcing the water out, and thus giving the boat reserve buoyancy.

Veteran Makes Record.

The Clyde steamer the London riveting record, according to the Daily Mail, Thomas Davine, a former soldier, at the Dalmeida yards of William Boardman & Co., has driven 4,423 rivets in a side of a ship in nine hours. The London record, made by Robert Farrant, was 4,276 rivets in a similar time.

Chinese Shorthand.

The inventor of the system of shorthand established in China, must be a genius. The language has no written vowels and consonants, and one syllable, spoken in as many as nine different tones, has as many meanings. In spite of these difficulties, the new system permits a speed of 140 words a minute.

To this end the Government has decided to issue to any Municipality in Ontario a permit to cut fire wood in Algonquin Park or from other Crown Lands free of charge. ## Keep Your Paper FOR THE RED CROSS

The GRIMSBY Women's Institute are still anxious to get paper to be sold for the benefit of their Red Cross work. All parties who have old papers or magazines or old rubbers should keep them for this purpose. Fold your paper about a foot square and stack them one on top of the other until you have a bundle about a foot deep, then tie it up with good strong string, one that will not break easily. Keep your magazines separately and tie them up in bundles with strong cord. When you have a sufficient number bring them to the paper building on the east side of the Independent Block GRIMSBY.

Those who cannot deliver the paper themselves to the building, should notify the Independent Office and an automobile will call for the paper. Periodical collections will be made in the Village, but the parties, who make collections, are busy men and all papers should be tied up in bundles, so that they can be put into an automobile quickly, so as to save time. Parties in the township, who have no way of delivering the paper themselves should make arrangements with some neighbor to bring them to the paper house on his drive or in his automobile.

The Salvation Army from Hamilton has been gathering papers in GRIMSBY and district, but as this organization has no tabernacle in GRIMSBY, the GRIMSBY people should keep their paper for their local Red Cross benefit. If a thousand families save all the paper, they will soon make a car load.

Do not roll the paper into small rolls as they have to be unrolled before they go in the bales and this work costs almost as much as the paper is worth.

If these instructions are followed carefully the Red Cross can make some money out of waste paper.

MONEY TO LOAN

Parties wishing to pay off old loans, to purchase more land, or to make improvements, can secure either private or company money at reasonable rates.

It is drawn to the attention of our readers that under the Canadian Registration Act all persons who were not of the age of sixteen years on or previous to the 22nd, of June and who have subsequently celebrated their sixteenth birthday, that they must, within thirty days of celebrating such birthday, present themselves before the local Postmaster and make their Registration. Any person who changes their address must notify the Registration Board, Ottawa, immediately, of such change. And any person who marries, must notify the Registration Board, Ottawa, of such marriage. These letters should be addressed "Canadian Registration Board, Ottawa," and are free from postal charges.

We in Canada are now faced with war conditions, both as to foodstuffs and wearing apparel. Clothing is scarce and rapidly becoming very dear. Three large boats containing hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of English woollens for Canada, were sunk by submarines in last month. We, despite the great shortage in woollens are still in a position to sell you clothing at reasonable prices and still give good substantial goods that will not assume that "cottony" look after a few weeks wear. We have ready-made suits from $10.00 up to $30.00 and make up suits to order from $15.00 to $45.00. We manufacture our own goods and can positively save you money on any clothing you may intend to buy. We would also advise that the sooner you buy the better, as the assortment is better now, and prices lower than they will be later on. Assuring you of our best services at all times, Farrar Clothing Manufacturer, 5 Market Square, Hamilton. We give premium tickets.

ing from the East.

Mr. Theal states that he was running at a low rate of speed and the boy was only about six feet in front of him when he noticed him first, and he could not prevent the accident.

Young Pyett was knocked down and the machine passed over his body just above his nether limbs; strange to say no bones were broken but the lad received a very bad cut on his left arm, just below the elbow, and this, with some bruises about his body appeared to be all that was wrong with him.

Mr. Theal immediately took the boy, in his machine, to the office of Dr. Gesser, where he was given treatment for his injuries, and he was afterwards taken home by his uncle, Mr. Ben Pyett.

The youngster is very sore and badly shaken up and is suffering considerably from the wound in his arm, but is progressing as well as can be expected.

MR. C. W. HARRISON NOW AT HAWKESBURY

(Beamsville Express)
Mr. C. W. Harrison, former principal of Beamsville High School, and for the past year at Rockland, has accepted the principalship of Hawkesbury High School. This is considerable of a step up, and the Express extends its congratulations. Hawkesbury is a town of about 5000 population with important public buildings. The school is larger as well as the salary to that paid in Beamsville. Mr. G. E. Pentland will be only about seven miles away from Mr. Harrison, in the town of Vankleek Hill. This town is a little larger than Beamsville and possesses a fine collegiate. It is somewhat of a coincidence that our two former principals should both go to the eastern end of the province and be so closely situated.

ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH BAZAAR A GREAT SUCCESS

As usual the annual Bazaar of St. Joseph's (R. C.) Church, held on three evenings last week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, on the Church grounds, Paton St., was an unqualified success.

The Bazaar has now become a fixture in GRIMSBY, and not only do the local people turn out to enjoy themselves, but there is generally a good attendance from outside points, and people this year were there from Toronto, Hamilton, St. Catharines, and, of course, the whole surrounding district.

Saturday night was the big night and the usual large crowd was on hand to participate in the enjoyment. The dancing platform, music for which was provided by Wilcox's Orchestra and local young ladies was well patronized and all the booths did a good business.

The big centre of attraction was the wheel of fortune and hundreds of articles were distributed to lucky holders of winning numbers. The grand prize-drawing took place at twelve-thirty, Borden's time, which of course, was only eleven-thirty by Sun time, and the prizes were distributed as follows:

First—Mahogany Rocker—J. Fattie, Thorold.
Second—Parlor Table—E. Frazer, 20 Stinson St., Hamilton.
Third—$5 Gold Piece—Miss McInerany, 25 Monroe St., Toronto.
Fourth—Bronze Fish Bowl—M. C. Hynes, 83 James St., St. Catharines.
Fifth—Bronze Marble Figures—Mrs. Fred Rowan, Beamsville.
Fork—Miss Coulson, GRIMSBY.
Rev. Father Longo and the members of St. Joseph's Church desire to express their very sincere thanks to the people for their liberal patronage and to those who so kindly offered and gave their assistance to make the Bazaar a success it was.

MARKET COCKERELS AT WEIGHT OF TWO POUNDS

Farmers or poultrymen will find it more profitable to market young cockerels when they reach a weight of 2 pounds rather than to feed the birds until late fall or early winter, according to results secured in feeding tests at the Ohio Experiment Station. The experiments show that at least 10 pounds of grain must be fed to produce a pound of gain and it is doubtful whether grain should be utilized for meat production through poultry.

On the average the feed necessary to grow the birds to maturity will cost 4 cents a pound; thus unless the poultry producer has a special market for the heavier birds, the price secured next fall may not pay for the feed given the fowls.

Young cockerels marketed now as broilers generally bring an attractive price; then the flock may at once be fed with a view of developing winter-egg producers, the poultry specialists point out.

GRIMSBY EAST

Mrs. Greenwood and her niece and daughter from Winnipeg, are spending a few days this week at Niagara Falls, N. Y. They will no doubt be greatly charmed with the scenic beauty of the landscape, both above and below the Falls. Next week they intend to take in the Toronto Exposition.

Mr. Greenwood has received word that his grandson, Lieut. A. Davidson of Dundas, is expected home this week from the front, on furlough.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Greenwood of GRIMSBY East, have had the pleasure this last week or so of receiving and entertaining several friends from Winnipeg. Mrs. Greenwood and two of the young ladies went down to Niagara Falls, N. Y. some days ago and these ladies were greatly delighted with their first visit to the Falls. Their ride up the River-side to Chippawa, was a great delight. They were greatly taken with the scenery of the river. On their return to GRIMSBY East, they took the train for Toronto and thence on to Ottawa for a week or so.

On Saturday the 17th inst. Mr. A. Greenwood received a message that his nephew, Lieut. L. Rehder, of Paris, who has been at the front for sometime, was killed in action on Aug. 8th, and his chum Lieut. Hamilton, of St. Catharines, was killed at the same time. The parents of these noble boys feel the blow very keenly. Their sons like many others have made the supreme sacrifice to the freedom of the world.

FALL HATCHED CHICKENS

More attention should be given to fall chickens, for there is a large profit made in them, writes a reader. Very often hens steal their nests away and come up with the chicks in the fall. These are, as a rule, neglected and the chicks die from exposure and want of food. Experience has taught me that it is a wise thing to care for these chicks, for they will live through the winter if properly taken care of, and be ready for the market in March or April when the price for young fies is good.

Last fall, the 1st of November, I three hens to hatch out thirty-four chicks. I have a room at one end of my chicken house that is plastered and has a floor and windows in it. I save all the chicks to one hen, and put them with her in this room. I kept plenty of straw on the floor for warmth and litter, provided them with a box of oyster shell, and fed them all winter on alfalfa, grains, meat scraps and hot mash made of middlings.

I had a nice bunch of chicks ready for the market. I made a contract with the manager of a large hotel to sell them to him for 60 cents a pound. One does not mind the labor spent when considering the nice profit.

These chicks were hatched by hens which stole their nests away. This fall I expect to set my incubator and hope to have a larger bunch to sell in the spring.

SCRAP FOR HENS

When tankage of good quality is more readily available than meat scrap, it can likely be combined with corn to make a satisfactory ration for laying hens, concludes poultrymen at the Ohio Experiment Station who have tested the two feeds. The materials were of practically equal value in a test extending over two years when they were fed with bran and corn in a mash. Shelled corn was fed twice daily in the fall to each lot of 30 hens.

The tankage had a slightly higher value per pound than meat scrap, it constituted 9 1/2 per cent. of the ration as the meat scrap 11 per cent. Ordinarily tankage is a little cheaper than meat scrap, but it contains about a fifth more protein than meat scrap does. Often it is used in hog feeding and some feed can also be used for poultry.

PASSENGER CAR SERVICE TO BE REDUCED ON THE HAMILTON-BURLINGTON-OAKVILLE LINE

Some time ago there was considerable talk amongst railway men and in the newspapers about an increase in rates on the Electric Railways running out of Hamilton.

These Railway consist of the H. G. & B. running to Beamsville, the Radial, to Burlington and Oakville, the Hamilton and Brantford, and the Hamilton and Dundas Lines.

At that time it was stated that the by-laws passed by the Hamilton City Council and the Burlington Council would prevent any raise in rates on the Radial. No raise has taken place on any of the roads but in the Hamilton papers on Monday, August 19, 1918, a letter from E. P. Coleman, General Manager of the Dominion Power and Transmission Co., definitely states that unless some arrangement is entered into between the Railway Company and the local municipalities, that the passenger car service will be greatly reduced after September 15, on the line running between Hamilton and Burlington and Oakville.

Mr. Coleman states, positively, that the line from Hamilton to Oakville has never paid and that there has been a continuous loss charged up against the road year after year. He states that the time has arrived when the Company must reduce its service in order to reduce its loss.

To the casual observer it would seem very strange that the Hamilton and Oakville line is being run at a loss, as all travelling on that line know that there generally is a full supply of passengers on every car. The trouble, therefore, must lie in the fact that the passengers are being carried too cheaply.

Of course when the common-sense view of the matter is taken, it is reasonable to suppose that it costs the Company, now, in the year 1918, a great deal more to operate its railway line than it did ten years ago, and if the price of beef, butter and eggs, and steel and wire, and labor has gone up there is no reasonable reason why the passenger rates should not go up.

But as the Railway line is a public utility the passenger rates should not be raised without a conference between the Railway Company and the Railway Board, and the Municipalities affected. And, if, at the conference it could be shown that the Railway Company is operating at a loss, then the Company is clearly entitled to raise its rates. But, if it is shown that the roads being run at a good profit even under changed conditions, then the Company has no right to raise its rates. It would appear, however, from the letter of Mr. Coleman that the part of the system in question is not paying and it certainly is not right that a Railway company should be forced by by-laws or any other laws to continuously carry people at a loss.

We have not heard anything further with regard to the raising of the rates on the H. G. & B. part of the system, and if a good steady traffic is any criterion we assume that this piece of road is paying.

In order that our readers may see the stand taken by the Radial Company, we publish Mr. Coleman's letter. The letter is addressed to City Clerk Kent, Hamilton:

Mr. Coleman's Letter

"The Hamilton Radial Electric Railway has throughout its history been a losing concern. Scarcely a year since its inauguration has it had anything to show as the result of operation but loss. The rates of fare insisted on by municipalities in the by-laws are quite too low for a well equipped and well managed system to avoid constantly recurring returns of actual loss. The present cost of materials, high wages and other necessary outlays has greatly aggravated this loss, which has become intolerable.

"Electric railways all over the continent have been allowed to increase their fares and the Dominion board of railway commissioners has expressed the opinion that the present rates of fare are unreasonably low. The Railway company is therefore compelled, with a view to reducing its loss as far as possible, to reduce its scale of operations to the simple requirements of the franchise by-laws.

The municipal councils in a sense of representing the public have the responsibility cast on them of avoiding or removing any inconvenience that may be suffered; but from any reasonable view of the situation it cannot be expected that the company must voluntarily consider a loss more and more as the years increase.

The Company has been willing to leave the fixing of the rates to the adjudication of the Dominion railway board, the municipal by-laws to be amended accordingly; but neither is hereby given that under a present rates of fare the service must and will be, on and after Sept. 15 next, reduced to the number of cars each way required by the by-laws.

SUGAR CONSERVATION IMPERATIVE

The Canada Food Board has asked private householders of Canada still further to restrict their consumption of sugar for personal use to 1 1/2 pounds per month per person and to use a certain proportion of brown sugar. The Board also warns against hoarding, hoarding, unnecessary and contrary to the law.

The Cuban crop of sugar has fallen short by 500,000 tons of the previous estimates; the American sugar beet crop has also proved disappointing as has the Louisiana cane crop. The recent German drive was a further cause of sugar shortage as a large beet acreage was overrun and many sugar factories destroyed. Thousands of tons of sugar have been sunk by submarines, including a 10,000 ton cargo recently lost off the Atlantic Coast. Conservation of sugar is imperative. There is sugar in Canada for everybody in moderation but none for extravagant use, for wasteful use or for illegal hoarding.

SMOKE TACKETTS

whereby it was hoped to soil spotted meat for good.

"What spare time I had I devoted to experimenting along mechanical lines and patented an invention that has been profitable. Sometime ago the department of justice borrowed me on a few cases with a scientific bearing, and more recently offered me incidental work with them on such favorable terms that I resigned my other position. The terms include liberal vacations, one of which I am now taking. And here I am! Is that sufficient?"

"What about your forty horsepower kick? You don't practice that for drawing room exhibitions, I take it?" "Sometimes," confessed the scientist. "I have found myself at close quarters with persons of dubious character. The fact is, that an ingenious plot to get rid of a very old friend, Dr. Lucius Carter, the biologist, drew me into the criminal line, and since that phase of investigation has seemed fairly to obtrude itself on me, officially and unofficially. Even up here where I hoped to enjoy a month's rest—do you know," he said, breaking off—"that you have a most interesting mass of ocean currents hereabouts?"

"Of course, Lonesome Cove. But kindly finish that 'even up here.' I recollect your saying that you were waiting for me. Haven't traced any scientific crime to my door, have you?"

"Let me forget my work for a little while," pleaded his visitor, "and look at yours." Sedgwick rose. "Come upstairs," he said and led the way to the big, bare, bright studio.

From the threshold Chester Kent delivered an opinion after an approving survey. "You really work, I see."

"I really do. Where do you see it, though?"

"All over the place. No draperies or fripperies or fopperies of art here. The bare room the more work done in it."

He walked over to a curious contrivance resembling a small hand press, examined it, surveyed the empty easel, against which were leaning face in a number of pictures all of a size and turned half a dozen of them over, ranging them and stepping back for examination.

"Good work," pronounced Kent quietly, and in some subtle way the commonplace words conveyed to their hearer the fact that the man who spoke them knew.

"It's the best there is in me at least," said Sedgwick.

Kent went slowly around the walls, keenly examining, silently appraising. There were landscapes, genre bits, studies of the ocean in its various moods, all the varied subjects handled with a deftness of truth and drawing and colored with a clear softness quite individual.

"Have you found or founded a new system of coloring?" asked Kent as he moved among the little masterpieces. "No; don't tell me." He touched one of the surfaces delicately. "It's not paint, and it's not pastel. Oh, I see! They're all of one size, of course." He glanced at the heavy mechanism near the easel. "They're color prints."

Sedgwick nodded. "Monotypes," said he. "I paint on copper, make one proof here and remark that it gives him the crease."

"Dennett! Well, then, that's all!" said Kent, as if speaking to himself. "There's a streak of superstition in these New Englanders. He'd be sure to interpret it as a confession of the fact. However, Elder Dennett this morning for a trip to Cadiz. That's so much to the good."

"He may have left for a trip to Hindostan for all I care," stated Sedgwick with conviction. "What's all about anyway?"

"I'll tell you as soon as I've cooled over a little. Just let me cool my mind down with some more of your pictures." He turned to the wall border again and faced another picture out.

"What's this? You seem to be something of a dab in black and white too."

"Oh, that's an imaginary face," said Sedgwick carelessly.

"Imaginary face studied from various angles," commented Kent. "It's a very lovely face and the most wonderful I've ever seen. A fairly prisoned on earth by cockerow might wear some such expression of startled wondering purity, I fancy."

"Poetry as well as mystery," Kent, you grow and expand on acquaintance."

"There is poetry in your study of that imaginary face. Imaginary! Um-hum!" continued Kent dryly as he stooped to the floor. "I suppose this is an imaginary hairpin too."

"My Chinaman!" began Sedgwick quickly, when the other caught him up.

"Don't be uneasy. I'm not going to commit the foolishness of asking who she is."

"If you did I give you my word of honor I couldn't tell you. I only wish I knew."

There was silence between them for a moment, then the painter broke out with the air of one who takes a resolution.

"See here, Kent! You're a sort of detective, aren't you?"

"I've been called so."

"And you like my picture of 'The Rough Rider'?"

"Five hundred dollars' worth."

"You can have that and any other picture in my studio except this one," he indicated the canvas with the face. "If you'll find out for me who she is."

"That might be done. We shall see. But frankly, Sedgwick, there's a matter of more importance."

"Importance? Good heavens, man! There's nothing so important in this world!"

"Oh, is it as bad as that?"

A heavy knock sounded from below, followed by the Chinaman's voice intermingled with boyish accents demanding Sedgwick in the name of a telegraph company.

"Send him up!" ordered Sedgwick, and the boy arrived, but not Kent had quickly removed "The Rough Rider" from its place of exhibit.

"Special from the village," announced young Mercury. "Sign here."

After the signature had been duly set down and the signer had read the message with knit brows, the archaic hinged, bit with news.

"Say, heard about the body on the beach?"

Kent turned quickly to see Sedgwick's face. It was interested, but unmoved as he replied:

"No. Where was it found?"

"Lonesome Cove. Woman. Dressed well. Washed up on a grating last night or this morning."

"It's curious how they all come in here, isn't it?" said the artist to Kent.

"This is the third this summer."

"And it's a corker!" said the boy. "Sheriff's on the case. Body was all chained up, they say."

"I'm sure they feed you at the office to help circulate the news, my son," said Kent. "And I'll bet you this quarter, payable in advance, that you can't get back in half an hour on your wheel."

With a grin the boy took the coin. "I got yer," he said and was off.

CHAPTER III. A Strange Meeting.

AND now, Sedgwick, said Kent decisively, "If I'm to help you suppose you tell me all that you know about the woman who called on you last evening?"

"Last evening? Ah, that wasn't the girl of the picture! It's an interminable six days since I've seen her."

"No; I know it wasn't she, having seen your picture, and since then your visitor of last night. The question is, Who was it?"

"Wait! How did you know that a woman came here last night?"

"From common sense."

"And where have you seen her since?"

"On the beach at Lonesome Cove. 'Lonesome Cove,' repeated Sedgwick mechanically, then with a startled glance. "Not the dead woman?"

Kent nodded, catching him fast. For a space of four heartbeats—very slow and tense they counted—there was silence between them. Kent broke it.

"Do you see how the wind of frankness?"

"You mean that I shall be asked of having a hand in her death?"

"Strongly suspected, at least."

"On what basis?"

"You are the only person who has seen her alive."

"Surely that isn't enough?"

"Not of itself. There's a brickbat of your right ear."

Involuntarily Sedgwick's hand went to the spot.

"Who gave it to you?" pursued Kent.

"You know it all without my saying you," cried Sedgwick; "but I never saw the woman before I met you. What I give you my word of honor she came and went, but who she is or why she came or where she went I have no more idea than you have—perhaps not nearly so much."

"There you are wrong. I'm depending on you to tell me about her."

"Not if my life hung on it. And how could her being found drowned on the beach be connected with me?"

"I didn't say that she was found drowned on the beach."

"You did not garden me; it was the essence of my life," stated Sedgwick with conviction. "What's all about anyway?"

"That is quite a different matter."

"She wasn't drowned?"

"I should be very much surprised if the autopsy showed any water in the lungs."

"But the boy said that the body was washed to a grating, and there were chains on it—is that true?"

"It was washed to a grating and manacled."

"Manacled? What a ghastly mystery!" Sedgwick dropped his chin in meditation. "If she wasn't drowned then she was murdered and thrown overboard from a ship—is that it?"

Chester Kent smiled inscrutably. "Suppose you let me do the questioning a while. You can give me as few whistles as to the identity of your yesterday's visitor?"

There was the slightest possible hesitation before the artist replied. "None, at all."

"If I find it difficult to believe that what will the villagers think of it when Elder Dennett returns from Cadiztown and tells his story, as he is sure to do?"

"Does Dennett know the woman?"

"No; but it isn't his fault that he doesn't. He did his best in the interviewing line when he met her on her way to your place."

"She wasn't on her way to my place," objected Sedgwick.

"Dennett got the notion that she was. He hid behind a bush and watched."

"Did he overhear our conversation?"

"He was too far away. He saw the attack on you. Now, just fit together these significant bits of fact. The body of a woman, dead by violence, is found on the beach not far from here. The last person, as far as is known, to have seen her alive is yourself. She called on you, and there was a colloquy, apparently vehement, between you, culminating in the assault upon you. She hurried away. One might well guess that later you followed her to her death."

"I did follow her," said Sedgwick in a low tone.

"For what purpose?"

"To find out who she was."

"Which you didn't succeed in doing?"

"She was too quick for me. The blow of the rock had made me giddy, and she got away among the thickets."

"That's a pity. One more point of suspicion. Dennett, you say, saw your picture, 'The Rough Rider.' He will tell every one about it, you may be sure."

"What of it?"

"The strange coincidence of the subject and the apparent manner of the unknown's death."

"People will hardly suspect that I killed her and set her adrift for a model, I suppose," said the artist bitterly, "particularly as Dennett can tell them that the picture was finished before her death. I was sitting on my wall when the woman came down the road. I noticed her first when she stopped to look back, and her absurd elegance of dress, expensive and ill-fitting, attracted my closer attention. She was carrying a bundle wrapped in strong paper. It seemed to be heavy, for she shifted it from hand to hand. When she came near I spoke to her."

"You spoke to her first?"

"Well, we spoke simultaneously. She asked me the time. She seemed anxious to know. In fact, I think she used the word 'exact,' the exact time," she said.

"Presumably she was on her way to an appointment, then."

"Very likely. When I told her she seemed relieved, might even say relaxed. As if from the strain of nervous haste, you know."

"Good! And then?"

"She thanked me and asked if I were Mr. Sedgwick. I answered that I was and suggested that she make good by completing the introduction."

"She wasn't a woman of your class, then?"

Sedgwick looked puzzled. "Well, no. I thought not then or I shouldn't have been so free and easy with her. For one thing, she was painted badly, and the perspiration, running down her forehead, had made her a sight. Yet I don't know. Her voice was that of a cultivated person. Her manner was awkward and her dress odd for that time of day, and for a woman who carried herself like a person accustomed to some degree of consideration. That I felt quite plain."

"I felt, too, something uncanny about her. Her eyes alone would have produced that impression. They were peculiarly restless and brilliant."

"Inasmuch?" questioned Kent.

"Not wholly sane, certainly. But it might have been drugs. That suggests itself to me."

"A possibility. Proceed."

"She asked what point of the headland gave the best view. 'Anywhere from the first rise on is good,' I said. 'It depends on what you wish to see.' My ship coming in," she said. 'It will be a fair view, then,' I told her. 'This is a coast of guardship reefs.' 'What difference?' she said, and then gave me another surprise, for she quoted:

"And though thy soul sail leagues, and leagues beyond, thou loagst there I more see."

"That's interesting," remarked Kent, "and female wayfarers aren't given to quoting 'The House of Life.'"

"Narrowly escape to visiting this part of the coast. However, there was no ship. I looked for myself when I was trying to find the woman later. What are you smiling at?"

"Nothing. I'm sorry I interrupted."

"She walked away from me a few paces, but turned and came back at once."

"I follow my star," she said, pointing to a planet that shone low over the sea. 'Therein lies the only true happiness—to dare and to follow. Remember this meeting,' she said in a tone of solemn command, 'for it may mark an epoch in your life. Some day in the future I may send for you and recall today to your mind by what I have just said. In that day you will know the hidden things that are clear only to the chosen minds. Perhaps you will be the last person but one to see me as I now am.'"

Kent pulled nervously at the lobe of his ear. "Is it possible that she foresaw her death?" he murmured.

"It would look so, in the light of what has happened, wouldn't it? Yet there was an uncanny air of joyousness about her too."

"I don't like it," announced Kent. "I don't like it!"

By which he meant that he did not understand it. What Chester Kent did not understand, Chester Kent resents.

"Love affair, perhaps," suggested the artist. "A woman in love will take any risk of death. However," he added, rubbing his bruised head remissly, "she had a very practical bent for a romantic person. After her mysterious prophecy she started on. I called to her to come back or I would follow and make her explain herself."

"As to what?"

"Everything—her being there, her actions, her—her apparel, the jewelry, you know, and all that."

"You're said nothing about jewelry."

"Haven't I? Well, when she turned—"

"Just a moment. Was it the jewelry that you were going to speak of when you first accosted her?"

"Yes, it was. Some of it was very valuable, I judge. Wasn't it found on the body?"

"No."

"Not? Robbery, then, probably. Well, she came back at a stride. Her eyes were alive with anger. There came a torrent of words from her—strong words, too. Nothing of the well-bred woman left there. I insisted on knowing who she was. Before I could guard myself she had caught up a rock from the road and let me have it. I went over like a tenpin. When I got up she was well along toward the cliffs, and I never did find her trail in that mass of copses and thickets."

"Show me your relative positions when she attacked you."

The artist placed Kent and moved off five paces. "About like that," he said.

"Did she throw overboard or underboard?"

"It was so quick I hardly know. But I should say a short overhead snap. It came hard enough."

"I do not like it at all," said Kent again.

"You say that no jewels were found on the body. Was there any other mark of identification?"

"If there was the sheriff got away with it before I saw it."

"How can you be sure, then, that the dead woman was my visitor?"

"Dennett mentioned a necklace. On the crushed flesh of the dead woman's neck there is the plain impress of a jewel setting. Now, come, Sedgwick."

They walked on in silence for a few minutes.

"What of it?"

"The strange coincidence of the subject and the apparent manner of the unknown's death."

"People will hardly suspect that I killed her and set her adrift for a model, I suppose," said the artist bitterly, "particularly as Dennett can tell them that the picture was finished before her death. ## Berlin Pastors Still Blind

ON the occasion of the four hundredth anniversary of the reformation, five prominent Protestant clergymen of Berlin issued a declaration, "in answer to manifold demonstrations of a similar character which have reached us from neutral countries." Its appearance in America was delayed, and it has received but slight attention, except among those who read into it meanings which are not on the surface. This is the document:

"We German Protestants, conscious of the Christian heritage, and Christian ties which we hold in common with them, extend to all fellow believers, to those in enemy countries also, our heartfelt and brotherly greeting.

"We recognize the deepest cause of the present war to lie in the anti-Christian powers, which control the lives of the people of the earth, their mutual suspicion, their covetousness, and we behold in a peace by mutual agreement and reconciliation a peace that is worth striving for.

"We find the obstacles to an honest and closer approach of the nations to be mainly the unholy sway of lies and phrases by which the truth is distorted and alliances and also opinions gain currency, and we call on all, in all lands, who desire peace to resolutely combat this evil.

"We feel it a duty, in view of the present frightful war, in the name of our common Christianity, to strive henceforth with determination that war as a means of settling differences between peoples shall disappear from the earth.

"Dr. K. Auer, W. Mithack-Stahn, O. Meiss, Dr. P. Rittmeyer, R. Wiedlandt.

The closing paragraph, with its frank repudiation of militarism and war, is a welcome note, coming from such a source, though out of chord with the chorus of hate and glorification of arms which has disgraced the German pulpit since August, 1914.

Apart from this sign of chastened spirit, the declaration is disappointing. The second paragraph attributes the causes of the war to "worship of force, and covetousness on the part of 'the people of the earth.' That is the naked truth as related to Germany's attack upon the peace of the world, but it is stark nonsense as regards Canada's participation in the struggle. The "peace by mutual agreement," which they think is worth striving for, is not a safe peace for humanity, so long as it leaves the Central Powers under the leadership which has proved itself a menace to the world.

The third paragraph finds the obstacle to peace to be mainly "the unholy sway of lies," and calls on "all lands who desire peace to resolutely combat this evil." This sentiment shows that the truth is making headway in Berlin. Otherwise these pastors would know that it is not lies but stern and hateful facts that are the chief obstacle to a negotiated peace.

This declaration of the Berlin pastors has been hailed in pacifist circles as an evidence that "the morning light is breaking." We cannot believe it, until the darkness disappears enough to make visible some sign of "potential tears." We do not find such light here, except for the lonely beam that shines out of the final sentence, like a good deed in a naughty world.

Let no one be amazed at the attitude of the Prussian clergy toward the policies of their paymasters. Even in free Canada, where public opinion has been the only law, it is hard enough to maintain an independent pulpit. But the German Government leaves no room for private judgment. Pastors of the Established Church of Prussia must take this solemn obligation upon being admitted to its ministry:

"I will be submissive, faithful, and obedient to his Royal Majesty, and his lawful successors in the Government, as my most gracious King and Sovereign; promote his welfare according to my ability; prevent injury and detriment to him; and particularly endeavor carefully to cultivate in the minds of the people under my care, a sense of reverence and fidelity toward the King, love for the Fatherland, obedience to the laws, and all those virtues which in a Christian denote a good citizen; and I will not suffer any man to teach or act in a contrary spirit. In particular, I vow that I will not support any society or association, either at home or abroad, which might endanger the public security, and will inform his Majesty of any proposals made, either in my diocese or elsewhere, which might prove injurious to the state. I will preach the Word as his Gracious Majesty directs."

What light or leadership can be expected from a ministry that must submit its soul to such a yoke as this?

MADE IN GERMANY.

German Professor Had Regard for Cent and Decent.

A story of how an attempted German peace offensive directed toward President Wilson was turned down ignominiously by Prof. Heron, an American living in Geneva, is told by the Swiss correspondent of the London Daily Mail.

The German Government, according to the correspondent, tried to get peace offers sent to the President through Prof. Heron, who was visiting on April 15 by Prof. Quide, of Munich, a friend of Count von Helldorf. Prof. Quide was accompanied by the Dutch pacifist, Dr. Jong van Beek.

Prof. Quide said he had come to prepare the way for a meritorious peace, and gave Prof. Heron to understand that he spoke for Chancellor von Hertling and the German Foreign Office. He assured the American professor that the peace party in the Reichstag was about to gain predominance in Germany. Germany, Prof. Quide said, was willing to make the following terms:

First, to grant autonomy to Alsace-Lorraine within the limits of the German empire, provided the allies would not broach the subject of Alsace-Lorraine at the peace conference.

Second, the Brest-Litovsk peace treaties not to be discussed at the peace conference, although the allies might submit claims for the revision of them and Germany might make certain concessions.

Third, no economic war against Germany after the war.

Four, German colonies to be restored.

Prof. Quide asserted that the present offensive in France had the ultimate objective of achieving a durable peace.

Prof. Heron, the Daily Mail's correspondent writes, after listening to the German professor, exclaimed: "I wonder that you have the effrontery to ask me to lay such a rigmorale of cant and deceit before the American people. The United States intends to continue the fighting until the Prussian military power and, if necessary, the Prussian State along with it, is extinguished forever as a power for evil, whether it takes one year or ten."

Prof. Quide, adds the correspondent, left the house weeping.

The Prof. Quide referred to above is probably Prof. Ludwig Quide, a historian of the University of Munich, the Bavarian capital. He was a delegate to the 20th Universal Peace Conference at the Hague.

Belgian Judges Imprisoned.

A despatch from the Frankfurter Zeitung shows the determined opposition the Belgians are making to the German propaganda for Flemish independence.

"A short time ago we reported that the Belgian Government in Havre had sent a notice to the judicial authorities in Brussels to bring charges against and arrest two members of the Flanders council on account of their activities toward Flemish independence. That could, of course, only be considered as a demonstration, since it was impossible for German authorities to permit any such interference by an enemy Government, which had, even according to the laws of the people, nothing more to say with regard to the execution of justice in Belgium.

"According to the Wolff Bureau the general movement has now directed that the persons arrested shall be immediately set free and that all further punishments shall be forbidden. Furthermore, the members of the court of appeals who took part in the decision have been forbidden the further discharge of their duties, and three of the four presidents of the Court of Appeals have been taken into custody and sent to Germany.

Reaction from Identities.

In certain persons a curious reaction from physical indurition has been observed. Napoleon's indurate ambition and enormous egoism were probably exaggerated by the fact that he was physically small and insignificant. Tamerlane, who made himself master of nearly the whole of Asia, was lame, and, according to one of his biographers, "deformed and impious of feature." Pope, with his deformed body, became "The Wicked Wasp of Twickenham." Byron, doubtless spurred by his clubfoot, swam the Hellespont. The Kaiser, with his arm withered from birth, Treitschke, stone-deaf from childhood, and Nietzsche, with years of brain disorder leading to insanity, were the unholy triad.

Teuton religion which has done a whole nation into irresponsible fanaticism and almost wrecked the planet. King Richard III. exclaimed: "Then, since the heavens have snatched my body so, Let hell make crooked my mind to answer it."

China and the Great War

PARTICIPATION in the war was a subject of controversy in China long before it was actually undertaken, and indeed was one of the causes leading to the crisis which incidentally made possible the short-lived Manchurian restoration of last July. Those who favored such participation argued that it would give China a recognized place at the peace conference and enable her to secure two important and long-sought concessions, viz.: (1) the remission, or at least suspension, of the so-called "Boxer" indemnities, and (2) a substantial increase of customs duties.

As to the first, several Western Governments long ago recognized the justice of the claim by remitting its entire share of the Boxer indemnity; and this was done not as a mere act of generosity, but as one of justice. In other words, civilized men became convinced after investigation that the sum exacted from China by the Powers in 1900 was more than reimbursement for losses actually suffered by them, and amounted to a fine imposed upon a then helpless nation.

As to the second concession sought, it will no doubt surprise the ordinary reader to learn that China must obtain the consent of the Powers in order to increase her customs duties. This is because that branch of her public service, while technically Chinese, is really administered by foreigners (i.e., non-Chinese) in order to insure payment of interest on China's foreign loans. Indeed, it would hardly be inaccurate to say that the Chinese customs service is a creation of foreigners. The late Sir Robert Hart devoted his life to it; and while the treaties require that the Inspector-General shall be a British subject for some years to come, representatives of other nationalities, including our own, have contributed materially to its upbuilding and successful administration. Men like Macrae and Merrill, now retired, as well as Carl and Bryant, still in the harness, have worthily represented our country in a branch of China's Government service which has been honestly and efficiently administered, and which, with the "Salt Gabelle," or monopoly, similarly operated, affords an important if not the principal source of China's public revenues.

But the control of the Powers extends to the fixing of the amount of duty, and at present this is only five per cent. Considering that the gravest obstacles of the Chinese Government in recent years have been financial ones, it is not strange that its officials have looked to the customs as a source of relief and have regarded the present limitation as not only entirely too low, but as framed in the interests of foreign exporters rather than in those of the Chinese people. Moreover, those foreign representatives who have been most insistent upon retaining the so-called indemnity are also the ones who oppose an increase of duties; and to the Chinese, it seems the extreme of injustice to be forced on the one hand to pay these heavy exactions and on the other to be denied the full benefit of a legitimate source of revenue to meet them.

As to these points, therefore, China's case appears to be entirely just and reasonable. To what extent she will participate actively in the war which she has now voluntarily entered remains to be seen; but it is not unlikely that her most effective contributions will be labor. I may cite as an example of this the fact that the ship which brought me recently from China to America carried nearly a thousand Chinese laborers for the Western front, enroute at Vancouver for the rail trip across Canada and thence transshipping to France. Large-limbed and brawny, these coolies were the pick of Shantung Province; and it is safe to say that for trench digging and all the heaviest work of warfare each is better fitted than the average soldier. It is interesting to note also that the plan works well for the coolie, affording him better wages, food, and clothing than he would have at home and ensuring provision likewise for his family in China. This augmentation of allied resources has now been in progress for months and may prove a not inconsiderable factor toward that victorious outcome of the war.—Review of Reviews.

Thin Milk Is Dear.

Milk at seven cents a quart is so dear in Switzerland that the country has been talking about little else for months past, and a general strike is threatened if any increase is attempted. Since last summer the state has been paying the cost of the last increase. Now the farmers insist on a further increase of about nine cents a quart, and it is doubtful whether the state treasury can afford the expense. The Socialists say they will call a general strike if the price to consumers is raised. The milk producers say they will stop all supplies unless they are allowed to charge more.

Watering Plants.

A French botanist who has experimented with vegetable raising has determined the exact amount of water necessary for the best growth of various plants. In general, he found that a supply of water administered uninterruptedly drop by drop brought better results than even systematic drenching.

Railways in China.

The Government-owned railways and telegraphic service in China showed profits during 1917 of $15,500,000 and $4,800,000, respectively. The deficiency in the postal service for the same period was $110,000. This leaves a net profit in the three departments of $17,190,000 for the year.—East and West.

GIRLS NEEDED FOR FOOD CONSERVATION

Many women and girls will be needed this fall for the preparation of fruit and vegetables for canning. The increased production makes it doubly necessary for women and girls to come forward to prevent the fruit and vegetables from spoiling. Though much of this work is done in the homes, most of the canning and preserving companies are short of help.

The women's Farm Department, 45 King St. West, Toronto, is undertaking to relieve the shortage of labor by establishing camps for girls. These will be supervised by the Y. W. C. A. Some of them are situated by the lake, and all of them will be filled with happy girls. The work will open August 23rd, August 24th and September 1st. More canning orders are coming in now so there is still room for newcomers. The canneries pay by piece rates, but are guaranteeing a minimum of $1.50 a day to satisfactory workers.

Good girls are able to earn from $2.00 to $3.00 per day. The canners refund transportation up to $3.00 or $5.00.

Much of the product of these factories goes overseas to supply our soldiers; some goes to convalescent homes and hospitals in Canada, though a great deal of it is for home consumption.

The National Service Badge, issued by the Trades and Labour Branch, is awarded for this work. For further particulars apply to the Y. W. C. A.

TRY POTATO CREAM

Every household where home-made bread is baked can save wheat flour by an increased use of potatoes in the bread and still have a most appetizing loaf. Save the left-over potatoes from so-called "leftovers" and use them in which they were baked unless it appears that you have boiled them with the jackets on. In this case it is better to use fresh water. Mash the potatoes thoroughly while they are still warm and freshly cooked, add a small quantity of lukewarm water in which the yeast has been dissolved with the required amount of salt and set aside until next morning, then mix into a stiff dough in the ordinary way. Set aside again to prove, and when light knead down once; then let the dough rise until light and make into loaves. Put into the same. Let the loaves rise again under the same conditions as the first proof, but use only one-third the amount of dough required but when a large proportion of potatoes is used the dough must be very much stiffer accordingly.
